What is our intent?

We are here to protest the presence of Milo in our campus, which is a public university, and we believe that no hate speech, racism, misogyny and transphobia should be tolerated here.

Hate Speech is Not Free Speech!

We are not here to engage in physical confrontation or violence with the police, nor the far-right/neo-nazi groups.

We will protect each other to ensure our democratic right to protest and our safety.

Whose University? Our University!

Safety Tips

- Stay with the student/community contingent that is there to protest and do not engage with confrontation. If you desire to engage in confrontation, do not do it in a way that would put the safety of others at risk.
- Come with a buddy and/or a small group you know and trust and stick together; if you become separated, designate a meet-up point and make sure you have each others' contact info.
- Milo events often include provocateurs who try to harass people; we recommend not engaging them, even verbally; if you're in a space where someone is making you feel unsafe move away from them and tell others. around you what's going on so they know to be careful.
- Do not leave the protest alone, leave in groups (5 or more ideal) until you are far away from campus, make sure you are not followed and then disperse.
- Medics: As a precaution, there will be street medics on hand to assist in case of panic or injury; they will be wearing red armbands and you can flag them down if you need help.
- If there's an emergency medical situation, call the local medical dispatch center directly, as it's typically much faster than calling the police: (510) 444-1616.

Legal Tips

- There will be many trained Legal Observers on hand who will help document things like provocateurs or police harassing people, and you can identify them by their bright green hats.
- While we don't anticipate arrests, in case people are arrested, the National Lawyer's Guild will have a hotline set up that people can call: (415) 285-1011.
